

Coronavirus Disease and Oral Health

Information for Parents About Visiting the Dental Office

It is important that your child get regular oral health care. Before going to a dental office, talk with the dental team about changes they have made to lower the risk of spreading the coronavirus disease (COVID-19) to patients and parents.

Dental office changes may include:

- Calling you before your child's visit and asking questions about your health and your child's health, including their oral health. The questions may be asked again on the day of the visit.
- Limiting the number of people attending the visit. For example, having only one parent in the office with their child.
- Having you call the dental office when you arrive and waiting in the car or outside the building before the visit.
- Limiting the number of patients seen in the office.
- Requiring patients and parents to wear a mask while in the building.
- Taking the parent's and child's temperatures.
- Not providing care to children with a fever or other signs of COVID-19, unless the child has oral pain or a dental injury.
- Wearing more protective equipment than before, such as masks, face shields, and gowns.
- Disinfecting the room after each patient to lower the risk of spreading COVID-19.

This publication was developed with funds from cooperative agreement #90HC0013 for the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, Administration for Children and Families, Office of Head Start, Office of Child Care, and Health Resources and Services Administration, Maternal and Child Health Bureau, by the National Center on Early Childhood Health and Wellness. This resource may be duplicated for noncommercial uses without permission. This publication is in the public domain, and no copyright can be claimed by persons or organizations.

School readiness begins with health!

ADMINISTRATION FOR CHILDREN & FAMILIES

NATIONAL CENTER ON
Early Childhood
National Centers
Early Childhood Health and Wellness